Feeders in Milling and Micronization of Pharmaceutical Powders

Operations often involve the size reduction of highly potent APIs. As the potency of dry compounds increases, so do the complexities of the application. Here's advice on feeder selection and how it influences the process

'The feed rate into the mill is an important factor in determining particle size distribution.' By Sharon Nowak