

A Good Time To Consider Alternatives

According to a new technical market research report-Alternative Chemical Products And Processes-from BCC Research [1], the U.S. market for alternative chemical products is expected to be worth $46.6 billion in 2008. Furthermore, this market is expected to increase to $94.8 billion in 2013 with a compound annual growth rate (CAGR) of 15.3 percent. The market is broken down by end-use alternative chemical products, and includes plastics, packaging, cleaning and detergent products; miscellaneous specialty chemicals; and other chemical products. Miscellaneous specialty chemicals have the largest share of the U.S. market and are expected to be worth $17.3 billion in 2008 and $35.5 billion in 2013 with a CAGR of 15.5 percent. Other highlights of the report include:
