

West Coast to get break from heavy rain, snow

Reuters

(Reuters) - Northern California will get a break on Monday from severe weather that dumped more than 2 feet of snow in mountains before another storm arrives by Tuesday, the National Weather Service forecast.

A cold front that had brought heavy rain and snow and high winds that gusted to 150 mph at Mammoth Mountain in California had moved overnight into the central Rocky Mountains and the Great Plains, the weather service said.

Winter storm warnings and advisories are in place for higher parts of the northern Rockies.

SOURCE [1]

Source URL (retrieved on 01/27/2015 - 8:42pm):

http://www.chem.info/news/2012/12/west-coast-get-break-heavy-rain-snow?qt-most_popular=0

Links:

[1] <http://feeds.reuters.com/~r/reuters/environment/~3/lzlLz6vtixE/us-usa-weather-idUSBRE8B214S20121203>