

Man Dies in Industrial Accident

Published on Chem.Info (<http://www.chem.info>)

Man Dies in Industrial Accident

BAY POINT, Calif. (AP) — Officials say a 26-year-old man has died after being crushed in a machine at a Northern California manufacturing plant.

Cal-OSHA spokeswoman Erika Monterroza told the Contra Costa Times [1] that David Eleidjian, of Antioch, was operating a mixing machine at Henkel Corp. in Bay Point when he was caught and crushed in the machine a little after 11 a.m. Monday.

Monterroza says Eleidjian's legs were amputated and that he died from his injuries late Monday afternoon.

Cal-OSHA is investigating both Henkel and Tennessee-based HR Comp LLC because Eleidjian was working at the plant as a temporary employee of the Tennessee company.

The agency has up to six months to complete its investigation.

Henkel Corp., based in Dusseldorf, Germany, makes adhesives and other products.

Source URL (retrieved on 02/01/2015 - 8:10am):

<http://www.chem.info/news/2013/04/man-dies-industrial-accident>

Links:

[1] http://www.contracostatimes.com/breaking-news/ci_23037803/antioch-man-dies-fatal-industrial-machine-incident-bay?source=rss